Introduction

This document has been developed to assist pilots and operators transition from the existing general operating and flight rules to those that commence on 2 December 2021. It provides a guide to where provisions of the Civil Aviation Regulations 1988 (CAR) have been incorporated into Part 91 of the Civil Aviation Safety Regulations 1998 (CASR).

Part 91 of CASR prescribes the general operating and flight rules, including rules for take-off and landing, minimum heights and airspeed limitations, as well as other operational matters. It primarily retains existing rules from the CAR with a small number of new rules designed to enhance operational flexibility, safety, and compliance with International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) standards.

This document lists regulations from Part 91 of CASR against provisions in Parts 7 to 19 of CAR. The location of requirements (if any) in the Part 91 Manual of Standards are also shown.

If a similar provision is not contained in Part 91 of CASR, this is indicated by a '—'.

The comments provide a brief outline of some key differences between the existing and the new regulations, as well as other explanatory material and related provisions. Refer to the regulations and associated MOS sections for full requirements. A number of the new regulations are outcome-based and the prescriptive requirements of the CAR have not been included in Part 91 of CASR.

Unless otherwise indicated, regulations from the CAR that have been replaced by a Part 91 regulation will be repealed when the new regulations commence.

Parts 121, 133, 135 and 138 of CASR each contain regulations that apply in addition to the Part 91 of CASR regulations, and which, in some cases, replace the Part 91 of CASR requirement either completely or partially. Regulations that replace the Part 91 of CASR requirement have been referenced in this document for information purposes. Further details about the flight operations regulations that apply to operations under Parts 121, 133, 135 and 138 of CASR are contained in separate mapping documents.

This document should be read in conjunction with the relevant regulations. Guidance material is provided in the Part 91 AMC/GM document and advisory circulars, available on the CASA website.
